Computer literate definition quizlet

Sept. 29, 2011, 6:39 PM UTCBy Rosa GolijanWe often exclaim things like "My laptop is frozen!" or "I can't open those folders!" when we're having issues with our computers. But what if those problems and exclamations were taken literally?The funny folks of sketch comedy group Awkward Spaceship decided to find out and record the video above.Yes, some of the jokes might be a bit obvious, but I still got quite a few chuckles out of the clip — and I definitely needed those after a day filled with minor technical issues and frustrations.Related stories:Want more tech news, silly puns, or amusing links? You'll get plenty of all three if you keep up with Rosa Golijan, the writer of this post, by following her on Twitter, subscribing to her Facebook posts, or circling her on Google+. Technology is helpful until it fails. What do you do if your computer stops running? It's important to ensure that all your data — photos, music, documents, videos and more — is safe. It's easy to back up your computer to ensure that you have everything you need. Here's how.Back Up to an External Hard DriveYou can back up your data to an external hard drive and have a copy of that drive ready in case of computer failure. The most common operating systems have programs that help you back up your computer to a hard drive, and it's easy to do. Make sure you buy a hard drive that has the right capacity to handle all your data, and then all you have to do is plug the hard drive into your computer and use the backup program.Use an Online Backup ServiceIf you don't want to back up your computer to an external hard drive, you can use an online backup service that will automatically back files up whenever you're connected to Wi-Fi. These backup services have multiple options for backing up certain types of files or data in certain directories, and you can customize your backup times. These services require a paid monthly subscription. It's also worth noting that your initial backup will most likely take a long time.Rely on Cloud StorageIf you're not interested in paying for a subscription for a backup service, there are some free options that allow you to back up limited amounts of files at no cost. These cloud services allow you to upload a certain number of files to the cloud for storage. You can designate which files you want to upload, and the service does the rest of the work. These services don't offer quite as many options or as much capacity as a paid solution, but a free service may work for you if you want to back up a limited amount of data.Make It Automatic for Worry-free BackupYou can automate backups so that you don't have to do anything. Choose the right settings, and the program or service that you've chosen will do all the work for you. This option works especially well for online services, but it's not as convenient for an external hard drive.Use Multiple Services for RedundancyIf you're particularly serious about keeping your files safe, you can use multiple services for redundancy. Use an external hard drive to have your own copy of all your data and use an online service to complement your secure backup. You can even use a free service for certain files and a paid service or external hard drive for others. With multiple services at your fingertips, the possibilities are endless.
